

Great Faringdon can be classified as a Civil Parish. From the 1911 to the 1971 Census, it was located within Faringdon Rural District in Berkshire etc.

The broad picture of population change can be followed from census to census, but as each census has evolved to reflect and keep up with changes in society, direct comparison does not necessarily provide a good source of information about detailed change over time. Changes in the questions asked, in the categories used to present results, and in geographical boundaries, mean that each census primarily provides a 'cross sectional' picture of the country at the time.

Elements of continuity can nevertheless be found, for example the boundaries of local government areas in England did not change substantially between 1981 and 2001, after wholesale reorganisation in 1974, as referred to above.

I have been able to follow the census historical path back to the 1911 Census as per your request, although note that, based on the area measurements below, it can be seen that there must have been a boundary change between 1951 and 1961.

No census was taken in 1941 because of the Second World War.

Census Year	Population	Area in Hectares	Source
1911	3079	2386	1911 census administrative are vol 1
1921	2758	2386	1921 County report table 3
1931	2702	2386	1931 County report Table 3
1941			No Census. WW II
1951	3207	2386	1951 County report Table 3
1961	3389	1435	1961 County report Table 3
1971	3609	1435	1971 County report Table 3
1981	4646	1435	1981 Ward and Civil Parish monitors
1991	5235	1432	1991 Ward and Civil Parish monitors
2001	6187	1431	Key Statistics Table KS01 parishes
2011	7121	1429	Key Statistics Table KS101EW parishes

Census data from Office of National Statistics